The effect of green tea on colon cancer cell line through the elevation of DPH (1,6-diphenyl-1,3,5-hexatriene) fluorescence in vitro. Green tea (Camellia sinensis) has been used for cancer treatment as well as an antineoplastic agent. It is known to be rich in polyphenols that have antioxidant properties. In the present study, the effect of green tea on the DPH (1,6-diphenyl-1,3,5-hexatriene) fluorescence of HT-29 and CCD841SK colon cancer cell lines was examined. The DPH fluorescence of both cell lines was significantly decreased after treatment with green tea (25, 50 and 100 microg/ml). The 50 microg/ml dose of green tea was used to further investigate the effects of green tea on HT-29 and CCD841SK cells using caspase-3/7 and lactate dehydrogenase (LDH) assays, microscopy and flow cytometry. The results of the caspase-3/7 and LDH assays confirmed the lethal effects of green tea on these cells. The results of the microscope and flow cytometry studies indicated that green tea induced apoptosis and loss of mitochondrial membrane potential (MMP). In conclusion, these results suggest that green tea can inhibit colon cancer by inducing apoptosis and loss of the MMP. Former UFC welterweight champion Matt Hughes today sued UFC owner Zuffa LLC and UFC parent company Endeavor, as well as their respective executives: UFC president Dana White, UFC CEO Lorenzo Fertitta, and Endeavor founder Ari Emanuel.
